

MAZDA CX-70 NAMED BEST 2-ROW MIDSIZE SUV FOR FAMILIES BY U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT

CX-70 recognized for its safety, family-friendly features, and premium design in the 2025 Best Cars for Families Awards

IRVINE, Calif., March 11, 2025 /PRNewswire/ -- The 2025 Mazda CX-70 has been named Best 2-Row Midsize SUV for Families in the 2025 Best Cars for Families awards by U.S. News & World Report.

"A new entry in an underserved segment, 2-row midsize SUVs, the Mazda CX-70's user-friendly interior is huge by class standards, with excellent backseat and cargo room. Its overall combination of space, style, features and top-notch safety scores makes for a very family-friendly recipe," says Alex Kwanten, managing editor of Autos for U.S. News & World Report.

To determine the award winners, U.S. News Best Cars evaluates vehicles based on their overall rating in the U.S. News Best Car Rankings, which incorporates safety data, predicted reliability ratings, passenger and cargo space, and the consensus opinion of the automotive press. The award methodology also considers the availability of family-focused features such as in-car wireless internet, teen driver controls, automatic emergency braking, rear cross-traffic alert, and hands-free cargo area access. The CX-70 earned the highest composite score in its category.

"We are honored that U.S. News & World Report has recognized the CX-70 as the Best 2-Row Midsize SUV for Families," said Mazda North American Operations President and CEO Tom Donnelly. "The CX-70 is designed to meet the needs of modern families, offering a refined and spacious interior, advanced safety features, and an engaging driving experience. This recognition reinforces our commitment to crafting vehicles that blend practicality with premium design and performance."

The 2025 CX-70 and the CX-70 PHEV also earned the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety's highest safety award, 2024 TOP SAFETY PICK +.
